

MEDIA RELEASE

The Dingo Discovery Sanctuary and Research Centre in Toolern Vale is holding Open Days every weekend until to 23rd September. Cuddle, pat, feed, play and photograph cute fluffy cubs and meet friendly dingo adults. This is a unique opportunity to learn about Australia's apex predator and native dog. The dingoes themselves are friendly and curious, their wolf-like howls a truly memorable greeting.

Set on 40 acres of rolling hills backing onto state forest, the sanctuary opened at Toolern Vale in 2001 and currently houses around 40 DNA-tested pure-bred dingoes. That number varies over winter as the females bear their litters.

Visitors will not only meet the exuberant and playful dingo pups but also go home as passionate advocates for a beloved Australian animal. Founder Lyn Watson and her volunteers share their knowledge freely, pointing out the animals' special characteristics. They also stress the very real threats to Australian eco-systems, due to the lack of wild dingoes contributing to their natural habitat.
